

Who's My Match?

Supplies Needed: Index cards or name tags

Number of People: Any size

Directions:

- As the facilitator, prepare a name-tag for each participant at your meeting by writing the names of famous figures from famous partnerships on each name-tag. Both halves of the partnership should be represented on a name-tag. For example, you might have these eight name-tags: "Pinky," (and his match) "The Brain," "Beyonce," (and her match) "Jay Z," "Peanut butter," (and its match) "Jelly," "Romeo," (and his match) "Juliet."
- As participants arrive, give them a random name tag. This is their hidden identity.
- Tell the guests to read the name tag, then to put it in their pocket and not to tell other guests what is written on it!
- As a player, the aim of the game is to find the guest who owns the name tag that matches yours. If you are Tom, you are looking for Jerry. You do this by talking to the other guests.
- However — when answering questions about their hidden identity, players can only answer yes or no.
- When asking questions players cannot ask directly about a character's name. For example, questions like "Does your name start with a B?" or "Are you Beyonce?" are not allowed.
- When both players think they have found their match, they should go to an organizer to find out if they were correct or not. If you were correct, both players can now wear their name tags to show that they are "taken." This helps other players who are struggling to find their match. If you didn't get it right this time, keep searching!
